

Benefits of Booking Early Cheat Sheet

You Can Stay Where You Want To

Booking early means that the tourism hotspots will still have availability for the dates that you want. No need to compromise your experience; get the type of room that you want at the hotel that you want by booking early. Tourism hotspots include the Isle of Skye, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Pitlochry, and Highland destinations like Fort William, Oban, Inverness, Aviemore, and Aberfeldy.

First Choice in Guides

Like accommodation - your first choice in guide is also more likely to be available if you book early. Our senior and core guides generally get booked up for the coming season at the end of the last. Booking early means that there is flexibility in guide allocation and we can select the perfect guide for your clients.

More Operational Prowess

The summer season is a busy time of year for any operations team in a travel company. If booking last minute, we cannot guarantee that we will have the internal resources to plan the best Scotland adventure for you, or indeed at all. As a 5-star tour operator we pride ourselves on delivering excellence and whilst we hate to turn clients away we do often have to decline last minute bookings to avoid falling short of the high standard we set ourselves.

Save Money by Booking Early

Flight and accommodation prices tend to get more expensive closer to the date of travel. With higher demand, prices increase. Booking early means that not only do you save money, you get more for your money. This means clients have more to spend on exclusive insider experiences and activities.

Have the Trip of a Lifetime

Experiences are just as much a bookable commodity as flights and accommodation. Go diving with basking sharks or cross the Glenfinnan viaduct in a steam train. Have a story teller take you out on Loch Ness or forage for your own food with a qualified bushcraft guide. Ensure that you book in time to secure these unique experiences many of which are simply not available last minute!

More Time to Look Forward to your Holiday

Let's be honest, one of the best parts of a holiday is the anticipation. Once you've booked, all the logistics are with us so all you have to do is sit back, relax, and look forward to your upcoming adventure.
